

On average, each person in the U.S. consumes about 21 dozen eggs each year.

One egg supplies 12% of required daily protein.

Laying hens in Michigan produce enough eggs for each resident to consume 23 dozen per year.