Objectives for the 4-H Breeding Livestock Project

- To develop leadership, initiative, self-reliance, and sportsmanship
- To learn safety precautions to prevent injuries to yourself, to others, and to your animal
- To learn how to care for, feed, manage, and maintain the health of your animal
- To learn how to keep track of your project through proper record keeping
- To further cultivate livestock handling skills
- To have fun!

Why do we keep records?

- To keep track on income and expenses
- To keep track of the animal's health and wellness
- To know what supplies, feed, and other items are on hand (inventory)
- To better identify strengths and weaknesses
- To help with communication and writing skills
- To help with critical thinking and decision making skills

In this record book you will:

- Record income and expenses derived from this project
- Figure cost of feed
- Record animal health actions
- Conduct an inventory of supplies on hand or purchased
- Record general 4-H related activities
- Answer questions related to your project and share more about your project
- Include some pictures to capture your year with your project

Let's get started!

Project Plans and Goals

Goals will help you to learn more about your project and yourself. It is important to set reachable goals and for you to think about how you can accomplish them. Answer these questions below about your livestock project and about some goals that you have set for yourself and your project.
