Executive Summary

Michigan State University (MSU) is the implementing entity of the Borlaug Higher Education for Agricultural Research and Development (BHEARD) program. As part of the United States government's Feed the Future initiative, BHEARD is funded by the United States Agency for International Development (USAID), through the International Maize and Wheat Improvement Center (CIMMYT).

Honoring the legacy of Nobel Peace Prize Laureate Norman Borlaug, the program increases the number of agricultural scientists and strengthens scientific institutions in partner countries. BHEARD supports long-term training of agricultural researchers at the master's and doctoral levels, linking scientific and higher education communities in Feed the Future priority countries and the United States.

A BHEARD scholarship supports coursework at U.S. and regional universities in Africa, Brazil, Bangladesh, and India; providing funding for research and post completion research in the student's home country. In addition, the program provides a variety of allowances to cover training costs and laboratory fees. BHEARD also aims to develop, test and evaluate new models of small-scale institutional capacity development. This report documents BHEARD programmatic activities from October 1, 2018 through September 30, 2019. It includes a program overview, financial summaries, and student updates for Mozambique.

Acknowledgement and thank you to all BHEARD staff who have worked for this program and contributed to this report.

Activity Summary

The Borlaug Higher Education for Agriculture and Development (BHEARD) program, supported by US Agency for International Development (USAID) develops agricultural scientists and increases agricultural research capacity in Feed the Future partner countries including Mozambique. BHEARD has provided scholarships to students seeking masters and doctorate degrees at US and regional academic institutions and has provided funding for agricultural research in their home countries. The program also developed, tested, and evaluated new models of small-scale institutional capacity development. BHEARD sponsored 22 scholars from Mozambique, 18 successfully completed their program and went back to their home institutions after completion of their degree programs.

Successes

The decision to educate Mozambican scholars at Brazilian universities turned out to be a very good decision. The high quality of the Brazilian programs was evident in the academic rigor displayed in the theses and dissertations of the Mozambican students. The cost of educating in Brazil was significant lower than the cost of educating in the US, and the Mozambican students flourished under both the rigor and the discipline of the Brazilian programs. Not one Mozambican scholar experienced delays in the completion of their programs, much to the credit of the academic authorities at the institutions at which they studied. At the request of the Mozambique Mission the BHEARD scholars were concentrated in the area of nutrition. Through the BHEARD program, a significant contribution was made to the human capital in nutrition in Mozambique.

Challenges

Four scholars were withdrawn due to the following reason:

- Two for personal
- One for not completing within the timeline
- One for low grades

PAPER PUBLICATIONS BY SCHOLARS

Completing scholars were responsible for the following publications. The publication rate for Mozambican scholars (.8) is slightly below the average for BHEARD country cohorts, but this may be attributed to the fact that the majority of Mozambican scholars were pursuing Masters degrees rather than PhDs. In light of that fact, the publication rate for the Mozambican scholars is quite impressive.
